No fertitizer precisely similar to the American guano has ver before been introduced into this country; and atthough the limited quantity—some seventy or eighty tons, inaported in $67, in the Aspasia—narrowed our field of experiment, yet its emplicie success has led to a demand which will insure a horough trial of fix powers during the country season, and the sar 1859 will, we condensity believe, tell such a story as to sait to its universal use hereafter.

BRE—By request of their President I made an experiment has summer with a small quantity of the American Company' guaso upon a single marrow squash seed in my garden, the result of which was so very remarkable that for a long time I exhibited the product of my store, viz., five squashes, in all weighing revenly pounds.

The soil was common sandy lown, and no other manure was applied to the hill, except a handful of the guano, mixed as follows: after the squash was up I dug a hole around the hill, about a foot from the plant and some six inches below the mota, where I applied the preparation mixed well with the ground.

For a number of previous seasons I have raised the same hold of squash; but as I never before got half the quantity from any one vine I do not feel at liberty to withhold my testiment of the public. Yeur obedient servant, JOSEPH POTTER.

Dear Sir.—The corn I send you is a portion of the product ferm about sixty acres of land, on which I used a little over three ters of American guano. The land, although naturally good, and been worked so long without manures, that my acigsbers said I could not get a crop.

This corn is considered so fine here that I have been applied to for seed from it; still it is common corn inferenced in size by the naced your guano. As you will observe, the whole ears are subrely covered with corn over the tips. For this land it would have cost me over two thousand dollars for other meaner and putting it on, which would have very much reduced the profits of the crops. have core in which would have very ind puting it on, which would have very office of the crops.

which I used Feruvian guano—they yield being more than three mees as large. I tried the American guano also, on yellow sers and sweet corn, side by side with Peruvian guano and where fertilizers I n both, the results from American guano servevery much larger than from the other manures some of size I ever saw.

On peas, potatoes and cabbages the result was the asme; and

MOUNT PLEASANT PLACE, NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 2, 1899.

D. S. MARSHALL, Esq., President of the american Guano Co.—
BEAR Size—As the American guano has but recently been inreduced, and but few of our farmers know about the article, will say to all such, by using two bundred or two hundred and fly pounds per acre of the American guano they will be sure he first year to harvest twenty-dire per cent more, besides beseliting the land for future crops.
I speak advisedly, having had the last season much experince in the use of it on corn, wheat, grass, cucumbers and mesa, in all with equally beneficial results.
In order to test its relative value with the Peruvian, I plantd four scree of corn, three of which I manured with the American and one acre with the Peruvian guano, not using ny other manure on either.

Is order to rece of corn, three of which I make a four acres of corn, three of which I make and one acre with the Peruvian guano, not using my ether manure on either.

I found, after the corn had come up, and until six or eight aches high, that manured with the Peruvian looked the best; at soon after there was no perceptible difference in the rowth of the three was no perceptible difference in the rowth of the three manures and perceptible difference in the rowth of the three manures and the number and size of the cars.

I had thirteen grains of a new variety of corn, sent me by a riend, planted with American guano, using no other manure, and from these I raysad 21,875 kernels, carrially counted.

I used the American guano on apring what, laid down with over and timothy seed. The grass seed took fuely, and after the wheat was harvested every plant of the clover headed out, result I never before obtained with land highly manured with barnyard manure. Very respectfully yours.

SOUTH DARTHOUTH, Mass., Feb. 4, 1855.

The latter experiment being ee good. I was anxious tory it gain; and in the spring of 1858 I sent to New York for a layer supply, but could obtain only about 150 pounds. In June I ploughed up the forty rods referred to above, marking well the stakes of the previous year; and on that portion of round where the American guano had been spread (and on hich no other dressing had been applied) the grass was more and to per cent better than the the way rods dressed with the crush and guano. Showing plainly, in my opinion, that I did not exclude guano the first year.

A bent the latt of the American guano the first year. A bent the latt of the American guano had a rown about the first pour row for a part of the patch of ground on which the American guano had see on the patch of ground on which the American guano had so and where I new again applied the American or a risk island guano; and on the balance of the forty rods I used a Peruvian. This result was more than 75 per cent in favor the American guano. These four rown manured by American guano. These four rown manured by American guano were of mamment growth, completely covering eaurface of the ground, and of fine flavor. I had on these which turnips I ever raded.
